Flower Freeze

To prepare for this whole-group game, cut out several extra large flower shapes from bulletin board paper and label each one with a different sight word. Spread out the flowers on the floor in an open area of the classroom. On your signal, students walk in the same direction from flower to flower with their arms out to resemble flying butterflies. When you say "freeze," youngsters stop walking. In turn, each child reads aloud the word on the flower closest to him. Then continue the game in the same manner as time allows.

Blooming Numbers

This hundred chart activity provides a bunch of number practice. Prepare a class supply of construction paper flower cutouts (use the small flower patterns on page 26 if desired). Cut a hole in the center of each flower so that only one number can be seen through the flower when placed on a hundred chart. Give each child a prepared flower cutout and a hundred chart. Announce a number. Then direct each youngster to locate the number on her chart and position her flower so that the number shows through the center. Scan for accuracy and then continue in the same manner for a desired number of rounds. For more advanced students, announce a number in tens and ones for them to locate on their charts.
